

Company decides to lose pounds

WORKERS at a company in Corby have shed weight and taken part in races to support a charity.

Moore Stephens Financial Services, which has offices in Saxon Way West, ran a Get Fit for Summer Campaign which raised more than £1,700 for charity.

The whole team, based at the firm's Corby and Northampton offices, got involved - setting weight loss targets, competing in road races and wearing pedometers to increase and measure their steps taken.

Managing director Jon Telford, who lost more than two-and-a-half stones since May, said: "We are used to making lots of pounds for our customers, but this summer has been all about losing them. Team spirit has never been better and we have rallied around and supported each other every step of the way. We feel great, look fitter and feel so much healthier."

The company matched every £1 donated with an additional £1 in aid of the Batten Disease Family Association, a charity which helps people affected by the little known disease, which has no known cure.
